

Speaking and Editing for Visiting Scholars

This course for UC Berkeley visiting scholars, international students, and their spouses is specially designed for those who have already studied English for academic purposes but wish to improve their ability to communicate effectively and confidently. Participants improve their pronunciation, high level grammar/editing, listening skills and knowledge of common American idioms. Through focused instruction, discussion, and practice, students learn word usage, stress patterns and editing for more fluency in academic, research and work environments.

Custom Programs & Export Courses

English Studies Institute provides customized language and training programs for groups, private businesses, institutions and organizations. Through careful assessment, we design training for your unique needs and objectives. Custom programs are available to any age group-- from youth to university students to seniors - at any level of language proficiency. We tailor the dates, length, and content of your program to meet your specific needs. Many options for housing and activities are also pre-arranged.

Berkeley, the Campus, & the Bay Area

ESI is located in the MLK Student Union Building on the world-renowned University of California, Berkeley campus. The wooded campus offers a pleasant balance to the city of Berkeley's vibrant urban community. From windsurfing and kayaking at the Marina to visiting museums or dining at first class restaurants, there are abundant opportunities to enjoy yourself during your free time. From Berkeley, you can take a quick half-hour ride on BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit) to San Francisco, with its famous Fisherman's Wharf, Chinatown, Alcatraz Island, and Golden Gate Bridge. The greater Bay Area has other sites of interest such as Muir Woods, Napa Valley, Stanford University and Silicon Valley. Only three hours away are the breathtaking mountains of Yosemite National Park and the spectacular ski slopes of Lake Tahoe. It is no wonder that the Bay Area is one of the top tourist destinations in the world!
